

Applicant Tracking Software

Vamsi Avineni

David Pollak

New England College

CT5000 Grad and Professional Studies

08/05/2022

Applicant Tracking Software

Abstract

First Article

When choosing an applicant tracking system, a company should look for one that will streamline the hiring process. An applicant tracking system provides a central applicant database, workflows for interviews, and collaboration tools. It has an array of features, including job board posting, career site builders, and email integration. These systems give human resources an organized recruitment process. They also link relevant documents to job descriptions, making it easier to compare candidates. And because they're designed to work across multiple departments, they are easy to use and integrate into your current workflow. It is evident that this article provides important information about the topic. With the help of this article, even those who don't understand the topic can have the opportunity of learning and understanding it better.

Second Article

When it comes to deciding on an applicant tracking system, it is important to look for a free trial or free version to reduce costs. This program helps companies organize resumes, manage interview scheduling, and manage the entire hiring process. Moreover, it offers automatic emails to candidates. If a manager is not sure whether or not to use a particular program, he or she should check with the IT department to see if it will help them manage the hiring process. This article contributes to the topic because it provides important information to those that do not want to pay for applicant tracking software. There is a free version of this software that can be used to perform the same activities as the one that needs a subscription.

Third Article

When you choose an applicant tracking system, you can create one single candidate database, streamline communication with candidates, and reduce hiring time. Most ATS users say they can hire more quickly thanks to their workflows. They can even automate the interview scheduling process. Ultimately, they can make better decisions for candidates and recruit better. Applicant tracking software will make your organization a "place to work" for job seekers and increase your bottom line. If your hiring process is time-sensitive, you must reply quickly. If you wait too long, your perfect candidate could accept a position with another company before you can respond. An ATS with a timeline feature will let you set deadlines, and it will keep track of how long it has been since your last communication with them or your first attempt at scheduling an interview.

References

- Do, D., & Ohlsson, D. (2018). The impact of task-technology fit on user performance within an applicant tracking software: A qualitative study on the bullhorn system.
- Holm, A. B. (2020). Applicant Tracking Systems. In Encyclopedia of Electronic HRM (pp. 214-219). De Gruyter Oldenbourg.
- Tiwari, A., Vaghela, S., Nagar, R., & Desai, M. (2019). Applicant tracking and scoring system. International Research Journal of Engineering and Technology, 6(4), 320-324.